SLOC moves on after scandal

Olympic Committee selects new chief

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Salt Lake's scandal-scarred Olympic committee launched an internal shake-up Thursday that included hiring a new president and chief executive officer — Massachusetts venture capitalist Mitt Romney.

"My goal is to make Utah proud, to make America proud," Romney said.

SLOC gave Romney its unanimous endorsement to take over the committee running the 2002 Winter Games, which has been rocked by the biggest corruption scandal in the history of the Olympics.

"These Games and the preparations leading up to the Games will comply with the highest level of ethical conduct," Romney vowed.

As the Salt Lake Organizing Committee undertook sweeping reforms, including new conflict of interest rules, three of its leading members resigned.

Acting on proposals by Gov. Mike Leavitt, SLOC approved expanding its board of trustees from 33 to 50 and stripping it of its decision-making authority, making it an advisory board to a new management committee of 20.

Leavitt also gave any SLOC member with a perceived conflict of interest 60 days to resign. Two SLOC trustees directly affected — Earl Holding and Alan Layton — immediately resigned.

Layton's construction company won a $29 million contract to enclose the speed skating oval. Holding is the owner of Snowbasin Ski Area, which will get $13.8 million from SLOC as the downhill and super-G venue, and Little America Grand, a hotel being built downtown that is expected to benefit.

Also resigning was Verl Topham, president of Utah Power who had served on the original bid committee, saying he was doing so for the good of the Games.

SLOC also adopted an open meetings and records policy and that SLOC members be required to attend 75 percent of meetings.

Romney said he doesn't believe the Olympic movement would be permanently stained by the scandal, in which the bid committee executives were found to have engaged in unethical conduct in spending more than $1 million to curry favor with 24 International Olympic Committee members to win the Games.

Romney was appointed president of the SLOC on Thursday, two days after an independent ethics panel blamed two bid leaders for spending $1.3 dollars on 24 international Olympic Committee members to influence votes determining the 2002 Winter Games host.

Open documents 'Sunshine Act' heads toward House

A bill wihch will open Salt Lake Organizing Committee meetings and documents to public scrutiny sailed through the Utah House Government Operations Committee on Tuesday.

House Bill 285, sponsored by Rep. Dave Jones, D-Salt Lake, would require SLOC to act in accordance with the Open Meetings Act and the Government Records and Management Act, or Sunshine Act.

"We can have all the investigations, audits and ethics panels we want," Jones said, "but unless we allow the public and press to have complete access to financial information and records, we have no real assurances that the Olympics will be put on in a manner consistent with our values."

The effort to make all proceedings open and above board is a bi-partisan effort in which SLOC itself is participating, Jones said.

"As we look at it, we have no objection to the bill and we support it as it is," said Bill Shaw, SLOC representative.

Gaining credibility in the public eye, according to Jones, is crucial to the success of the Games.

Jones claimed there was no deliberate coordination between SLOC's announcement of new CEO Mitt Romney this morning and his bill to clean up the public image.

Utah State Legislature '99

"There was no relationship, but I commend SLOC for its decision this morning and their support of my bill," Jones said.

The bill is expected to hit the House floor early next week, where there are over 40 co-sponsors.

State funding and use of state facilities for Olympic events by SLOC is conditional upon compliance with the bill.

The bill does not require SLOC to open up all proceedings and documents.

Executive sessions and housekeeping matters such as personnel decisions will continue to be "closed" documents, in keeping with the exceptions found in the Open Meeting Act and the Sunshine Act.

The process will be lengthy because several changes must be made to software systems. President Bateman said software for the Admissions and Records Department has three million lines of code that need work.

"As we replace some of our software systems and as we move to the Web, that opens the door for us to begin to switch to a new ID number," President Bateman said.

Eric L. Denna, vice president of Information Technology and chief information officer, addressed students' concerns about BYU Web services during the question and answer period.

"We intend the Web to be the principle way of interacting with the university," Denna said.

Students will soon be able to access ABC reports and register for classes using the Internet, Denna said.

"Student AIM and ABC (reports) will both be available over the Web for fall registration this April, and then we have a series of plans for adding to that functionality," Denna said.

President Bateman also addressed students' questions about increasing rent and off-campus housing problems.

President Bateman said a committee of BYU administration members, students and Provo City Council members is working to redefine zoning laws south of campus.

Soft money is hard factor

BYU study finds issues ads yield campaign wins

By KATIE FORREST and MELINDA SEMADENI

Soft money may be the deciding factor in congressional races, according to a recent BYU study on campaign finance.

David Magleby, chair of the BYU Political Science Department and principal investigator of the six-month study, said soft money is financial contributions from interest groups and parties used for issue-oriented ads that cannot be used solely for candidate endorsement.

"Soft money gives parties another way of spending money to influence the election," Magleby said.

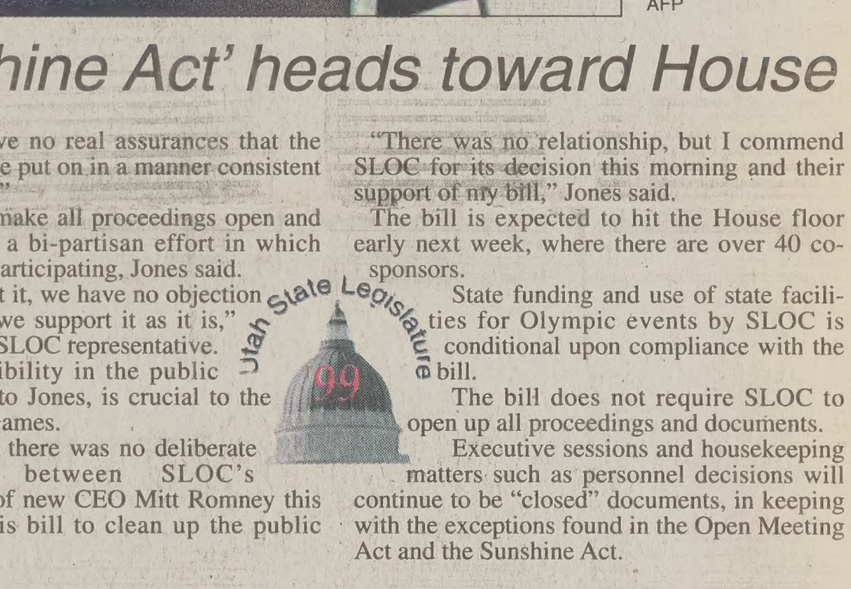
Magleby and other colleagues began the campaign finance research as part of a grant funded by the Pew Charitable Trusts, which provided $250,000 for the project.

The study, "Outside Money: Soft Money and Issue Ads in Competitive 1998 Congressional Elections," analyzed 16 competitive congressional races and the role outside money played in them.

Unlike hard money, the documented donations and campaign expenditures, soft money contributions made by interest groups can be unlimited and do not require disclosure or regulation by the Federal Elections Committee.

Marianne Holt, head researcher for the project, said the study drew three major conclusions.

First, the study found soft money donors becoming increasingly important to competitive congressional elections.



Second, Holt said the research showed a changing tide from a candidate-centered system of elections toward an interest group- and parties-centered system of elections.

Finally, she said the study showed that direct mail and phone banks, a form of soft money contributions, play an important role as the means of voter identification.

See the Video newsnet.byu.edu

Magleby and others who researched the study expressed concern for voters who are being deceived by such soft money-funded issue ads.

"The biggest problem is accountability. The consumer, or the voter in this case, has a hard time knowing. In fact, it's perfectly disguised who is saying what about whom," Magleby said.

While many researchers agree regulation is the solution, political science professor Jay Goodliffe said it doesn't look likely that the government will regulate soft money expenditures any time soon.

Goodliffe said incumbents would be unwilling to vote for the regulation on an issue which originally helped many of them secure their seats in the government.

Holt says she thinks disclosure of soft money sources is the best solution now.

"In the future, I think we will see more legislation about disclosure of campaign donations.

"It is unlikely that we will see regulation any time soon, but hopefully enforcement of disclosure of funds will move us in the right direction," Holt said.

AA pilots go against judge's orders

DALLAS — More American Airline flights were canceled Thursday as disgruntled pilots stayed out sick despite a federal judge ordering them to climb back into their cockpits.

Close to 1,100 flights were canceled Thursday, according to officials at AMR Corp., the Fort Worth, Texas-based parent company of American.

"It doesn't surprise me that we are having more trouble. As long as AMR management uses this confrontational approach it is not likely to get better," said Capt. Neil Ekblaw, an American pilot based out of New York.

The company could not say which flights were canceled due to sick calls Thursday, which were canceled due to previous sick calls and logistical backups. Negotiations resumed Thursday between the pilots' union and the airline. At Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, between 20 and 25 morning flights were canceled. At O'Hare International Airport in Chicago, about 25 percent of American's flights were canceled.

The airline estimated that 2,400 of its 9,400 pilots called in sick before Wednesday's order from U.S. District Judge Joe Kendall in Dallas to get back to work.

11th victim pulled out of avalanche

CHAMONIX, France — Rescue workers dug out a frozen body Thursday morning, which was trapped under 23 feet of snow in the French Alps; the woman was the 11th victim of the worst avalanche in the Chamonix valley in 91 years.

Authorities also ordered the evacuation of about 300 people from the village of Les Houches after a new avalanche slightly damaged a chalet early Thursday. A massive anti-avalanche barrier held the snow at bay.

Workers said that the bodies of a French ski guide and his girlfriend staying at the chalet were located under a drift, but remained beyond the reach of rescuers. In the French resort of Courchevel, rescuers found the body of a 28-year-old skier from New Zealand who was swept away while skiing off marked trails, police said.

Survivors recalled the horror of the avalanches that roared down a mountainside between the villages of Le Tour and Montroc-o-Planet in the French Alps, 30 miles southeast of Geneva, piling snow as high as 24 feet in some places.

Lawmakers: Jeans don't stop rape

ROME — Women lawmakers wore jeans to parliament Thursday to protest a ruling by Italy's highest appeals court that it is impossible to rape a woman wearing jeans.

"Jeans: An alibi for rape," read the sign held up by five deputies.

Wednesday, the court overturned a rape conviction against Carmine Cristiano, a driving instructor sentenced in 1996 to two years and eight months in prison for the rape of his 18-year-old student.

Cristiano argued that she consented to sex.

The court accepted his argument, saying it is impossible to take off someone's jeans "without the collaboration of the person wearing them" and that the girl must have cooperated.

English-only comes up short, again

The Utah State House of Representatives voted down English as the official state language Thursday.

After House Bill 138, Funding for Official Language, was voted down, four substitute bills were proposed in hopes to revive the bill. In an hour and a-half of heated debate, the House voted down all four substitutions, killing HB 138.

Rep. Tammy Rowan, R-Orem, proposed Substitution House Bills 1 and 4 while Rep. Chad Bennion, R-Salt Lake, and Rep. Wayne Harper, R-Salt Lake, proposed SHB 2 and SHB 3.

Rowan said the second and third substitutions to her bill did nothing. Rowan's substitution bills would have appropriated funds and required the state to do something about the issue.

In an emotional plea, Rowan urged representatives to stop playing games and vote yes or no on her bill.

Rowan voted against the second and third substitutions, essentially killing the bill she sponsored.

According to the Utah Constitution, HB 183 can come back to the House today.

"The managers have messed up big time," he said. "The athletes haven't. Our job is to go to work for the athletes."

Romney pledged to spend no more money than the Olympics take in, to spare taxpayers from funding, to protect the state's environment and to take no salary until the Games are over and in the black.

"Utahns will share in the thrill of the Olympic Games," he said.

Romney, the choice of Leavitt and SLOC Chair Robert Garff, met with members of a hastily organized selection committee Tuesday night.

That came just hours after the SLOC ethics committee released its report saying bid committee executives engaged in unethical conduct in spending more than $1 million to curry favor with 24 International Olympic Committee members and win the right to hold the Games.

Romney, 51, a Republican who unsuccessfully challenged Sen. Ted Kennedy in 1994, is the son of the late George Romney, governor of Michigan.

He lives in Belmont, Mass., and also has a home in Park City. Romney is a BYU alumnus.

Theft

A Chevy S-10 pickup was stolen from the BYU Creamery parking lot between 10:30 p.m. Sunday and 10:30 a.m. Monday. The vehicle's owner left the pickup unlocked and a key in the ashtray.

The owner notified University Police and officers located the stolen vehicle in a Deseret Towers parking lot around 3 p.m. Monday. Officers found credit card receipts in the truck and a stolen license plate on the vehicle.

University Police traced the receipts and license plate to the same off-campus apartment. Upon questioning residents of the apartment, officers discovered the suspect had stolen her roommate's license plate.

When officers located the suspect, she confessed that she had stolen her roommate's license plate to return the vehicle she had stolen. She said she thought University Police would not be able to identify the vehicle if she used her roommate's license plate. The suspect was arrested.

A change machine was robbed at a Wymount Terrace laundry room between 1:30 a.m. Tuesday and 9 a.m. Wednesday. Suspects pried open the change box and stole approximately $400 in quarters and dollar bills. The machine, valued at $2,500, was significantly damaged.

Baby clothes, T-shirts, underwear and stockings were stolen from the Wyview Park laundry room between 5 p.m. Jan. 29 and 10 a.m. Feb. 1. The clothing is valued at $75.

A framed inspirational poster titled "Persistence" was stolen from the Career Placement Services lobby between Jan. 29 and Feb. 2. The poster was valued at $50.

A black LCD projector, valued at $4,000, was stolen from a storage closet in room 130 AKH between noon on Feb. 2 and 9 a.m. Feb. 3.

A Honda Elite motor scooter worth $400 was stolen from a parking lot in front of the Museum of Art between Jan. 30 and Feb. 4.

The victim said the weather prevented him from moving the scooter. The scooter had Utah license plate number 398 GP.

A yellow and red men's mountain bike was stolen from a bike rack at John Hall between Jan. 23 and Feb. 5. The bike, a Schwinn Mesa LE model, had a $550 value.

Suspicious Activity

An unidentified man was observed peering into bathroom stalls on Feb. 6 at 1:20 p.m. in the Harold B. Lee Library.

The victim observed the suspect peeping into each stall. When the suspect found that the victim's stall was occupied, he began staring at the victim.

The suspect fled after the victim asked him to stop.

The victim described the suspect as an elderly man with graying hair and a mustache, wearing blue corduroys and Doc Martens.

University Police searched the area but could not find the suspect.

Indecent Exposure

A man exposed himself to a female student in the tunnel between the N. Eldon Tanner Building and Helaman Halls Feb. 4 at 3:10 p.m.

The victim was returning to Helaman Halls from class and observed the suspect approaching with his hands in his pockets.

When the suspect passed the victim he exposed himself.

The victim described the suspect as an overweight 20-year-old white man, approximately 5 feet 10 inches tall, wearing green corduroys, a green polo shirt and wire-rimmed glasses.

Winter competition offers study break

Students don't have to wait for the year 2002 to participate in the spirit of the Winter Olympics.

Olympic-style competitions are planned for students this weekend at the annual BYUSA Freeze Fest.

Thursday night, Freeze Fest '99 opened for student weekend competition. The opening ceremonies commenced with BYUSA President Brian Bowers in his ski apparel as the master of ceremonies. Bowers lit the "Freeze Fest" torch and officially welcomed BYU students to the winter festivities.

> "Freeze Fest '99 provides the much needed break from the winter semester."

> — Michael Pittman, BYU student

Bowers said BYUSA has planned the annual Freeze Fest this weekend with loads of activities for the winter enthusiast.

Each event has small competitions that students can win.

"Freeze Fest '99 provides the much needed break from the winter semester," said Michael Pittman, 25, a senior from Torrington, Wyo., majoring in biochemistry.

Saturday night the new Warren Miller film will be shown in the Joseph Smith Building. A trip to Jackson Hole will be given away along with T-shirts and gift certificates to Miracle Bowl and The Malt Shoppe, said BYUSA program director Kristen Bush, 18, a sophomore from Kentville, Nova Scotia, Canada, majoring in communications.

Bowers wants all students to participate. The activities include skiing at Sundance, extreme skiing and snowboarding movies and ice skating at Seven Peaks.

Michael Pittman, executive director of campus activities, said the activities are diverse and will be fun.

There will also be a service scavenger hunt for Wymount Terrace tenants, Saturday morning.

Thursday and Friday, Sundance Ski Resort is offering discount tickets and a voucher for free lunch.

"Freeze Fest brings students closer to the BYU community by getting students out there with other students," said Regina Christiansen, 20, a sophomore from Upper Marlboro, Md., majoring in prenursing.

Check-ups gauge marital stress, health

NewsNet Services

Married students can give each other the gift of a free marriage check-up this year for Valentine's Day.

The marriage check-up monitors the relationship between husband and wife, said family sciences professor D. Eugene Mead, and helps to recognize "soft spots" in the relationship early to prevent serious problems from developing later.

The program is being offered at the BYU Comprehensive Clinic on 900 East and Birch.

Graduate student interns in the Marriage and Family Therapy Program will conduct the counseling sessions which will include a brief questionnaire and a 20-30 minute assessment.

In all, the session will last about one hour, and couples will receive a feedback form dealing with different areas of the marriage relationship.

The free marriage check-ups began Monday and will continue through Feb. 19.

For information or to make an appointment, contact the comprehensive clinic at (801) 378-7759.

Craig Thomas, of off-campus housing, advised students to make a careful inventory of damages, cleanliness and conditions of furnishings immediately after moving into an apartment as well as before moving out. Without this initial inventory, students accept the apartment "as is."

Thomas also told students to make a file of all interactions with apartment management, including notes and requests for repairs, in case they need to defend their position.

"Keep a copy of everything in writing," Thomas said.

Bob Lauritzen, of off-campus housing, reminded students of the residential living standards and the impact living off campus can have on students.

"There are wonderful blessings associated with abiding by these standards, painful repercussions if we don't," he said.

Bill Thompson, from off-campus housing, gave three steps to improve communication with landlords.

These include keeping good records, communicating the problem directly to the landlord, and if the problem isn't being resolved, Thompson advised students to come into the off-campus housing office.

After the speakers, students were invited to ask Pace questions about off-campus housing.

Whitney Webster, 18, a freshman from Draper majoring in human biology, came to the seminar to find out general information about off-campus housing.

"Asking my specific questions really helped," Webster said.

Corey Meurer, 23, a junior from Farmington Hills, Mich, came to the seminar with his concerns about off-campus living. Meurer lives off campus and is worried about the high costs and low availability of housing.

"You know there's a problem. The system was made when there was just BYU. Now they've upped the enrollment and there's just not enough housing," he said.

Disney's 'Martian' crashes

By AMBER FURST
amber@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Disney's newest live-action movie tells the classic Disney tale. This one entertains the young audience but disappoints older viewers.

In "My Favorite Martian," Jeff Daniels plays Tim O'Hara, an under-appreciated television producer who stumbles onto a UFO crash. Martin the Martian is played by Christopher Lloyd. O'Hara helps Martin rebuild his spaceship, at first for selfish reasons, but later because the two become friends.

Basically, the underdog proves himself to everyone and wins the girl all with the help of an off-kilter friend. This movie is filled with the usual characters: nice guy, nice girl, prima dona, mean boss and crazy friend. In the end, the resolution is just as predictable as the characters.

I went to see "My Favorite Martian" with a positive attitude. I enjoyed "Mulan" and "Babe: Pig in the City" and they were movies geared at a younger audience. In fact, I liked "Mulan" and "Babe" so much I recommended them to my friends. Unfortunately, this movie did not have the same effect on me.

The movie was filled with familiar faces, such as Elizabeth Hurley over-acting as a spoiled news anchor. Although, she is usually a lovely actress to watch, her bouncy movements are so distracting that I could not take her seriously as a professional anything.

Daryl Hannah plays an awkward camera women who longs to be appreciated. I was surprised to see the role of the nice girl in Jeff Daniels' life played by a six-foot tall former mermaid. Hannah did a good job of making sure everyone knew she was brimming with insecurities.

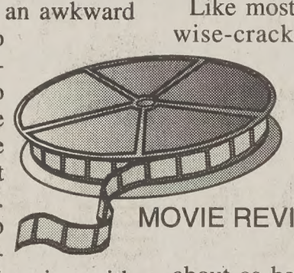
Christopher Lloyd stars as Martin the Martian in Disney's new movie "My Favorite Martian." The live-action film also stars Jeff Daniels and Elizabeth Hurley. It opens in theaters today.



MOVIE REVIEW

Like most Disney films, there is a wise-cracking sidekick played by Martin's suit, Zoot. Zoot Suit has movements of his own and once Martin sheds his martian gear for Earth clothes, Zoot Suit is free to roam about as he pleases. However, Zoot Suit does not possess the comic charm or clever lines of sidekicks from the past, like Sebastian in "The Little Mermaid" or Mr. Smeed in "Hook."

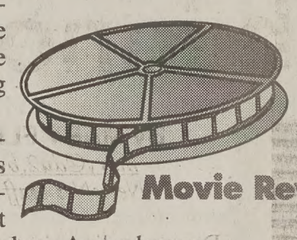
There are some movies geared at a younger audience that successfully entertain the adults. This was not one. The majority of the audience was young kids who seemed to enjoy the film more than I did. So at least part of the audience enjoyed their time in the theater.

Two new movies tell same old story

By AMBER FURST
amber@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

"Simply Irresistible" and "She's All That" are two predictable movies about love in the 1990s.

Being predictable is not necessarily bad, when considering other classic predictable movies: "Some Kind of Wonderful," "16 Candles" or "Pretty in Pink." Unfortunately, I think the newer movies are not as entertaining as these other films.



Movie Review

"Simply Irresistible" provides Sarah Michelle Gellar with her first starring role. She plays Amanda, a terrible chef about to loose her job. Then she meets and falls for Tom (Sean Patrick Flannery).

This meeting is supposedly so magical that Amanda becomes an amazing chef. Not only that, whoever eats her creations feels the way she felt when she cooked it.

If this sounds familiar, it is because it is a knock-off of the book and film, "Like Water For Chocolate." However, this film lacks the charm and emotion of the original.

Any type of interaction between the two lovers seems forced and unnatural. I was amazed that Gellar could not muster up any type of chemistry with her dashing costar.

The movie does not go into anything deep enough to make me care. I didn't care that Amanda's powers are never explained or that there is a magic crab that lives in her kitchen.

The best part of the movie involves Amanda's friend Nolan, played by Larry Gilliard, Jr. Nolan provides the comic relief of the film and he sure relieved me whenever he appeared. He is the only semi-realistic, funny thing about the film.

"She's All That" is the senior class of a Los Angeles high school and is a notch above "Simply Irresistible." It involves the classic story of Pygmalion: A popular boy making a bet to see if he can turn a nerdy girl into the prom queen.

Freddie Prince, Jr. stars as Zach, the student body president who wants to make the artsy Laney (Rachael Leigh Cook) into "Miss Popularity." These characters have more chemistry than Amanda and Tom, but the story does not develop enough to make them a realistic couple.

"She's All That" does not try to hide the fact that it is a predictable high school film. There are the mean popular kids, the big party where everyone gets drunk and the choreographed dance scene at the prom.

Zach and Laney are pretty, which made me wonder why they chose an obviously beautiful girl to play Laney and not try to make her more of a nerd. I was hoping for a better make over scene that would involve more than taking off her glasses.

At first I thought I was too old for the film's humor; I am three years older than the main characters. I came to the conclusion, however, that the movie just isn't that funny.

Syncopation offers free concert

By PETER THUNELL

BYU vocal jazz group Syncopation will present a free concert in honor of Valentine's Day on Saturday night at the Madsen Recital Hall in the HFAC.

Syncopation will perform favorites such as "My Funny Valentine," "Sing, Sing, Sing" and "Sweet Georgia Brown." The concert will consist of five ensemble pieces and a variety of solos from members of the group.

Syncopation director Bob Bailey said he is especially excited for the performance because he will be unveiling a song that he wrote, "Every Now and Then." The song will premiere Saturday.

"This song is my baby and I'm looking forward to seeing how it's received by the audience," Bailey said.

Syncopation just returned from a tour of Anaheim, Calif., where it performed at the International Association of Jazz Educators. The invitation to appear at the Jazz Educators was a first for Syncopation.

Eliza Payne, 18, a freshman from Alpine, majoring in vocal performance and a member of Syncopation, said the trip was beneficial for the group.

"The festival was a good experience for all of us," Payne said. "It was great to see what everyone else is doing in jazz."

The IAJE invited Syncopation after hearing the group on a CD of BYU jazz music.

Bailey said the opportunity for Syncopation to go to California was an honor and showed the progress it has made.

Saturday's performance begins at 7:30 p.m.

The acting is excellent. The loggers sway around the stage with glazed looks and slightly slurred speech in a convincing and humorous way.

Even though the plot was generally entertaining, I couldn't quite grasp the intended message. It included some obvious religious symbolism. The stranger is put up as if on a cross and then wounded in the side.

But the play is very sacrilegious. Blasphemy stains the entire show. The characters blatantly take the Lord's name in vain many times and often in an open mockery towards God. I questioned the contradicting message.

I had been told there was "some language." What I wasn't prepared for was language strong enough to warrant an R rating.

I was terribly uncomfortable the entire time. The constant cursing and blasphemy made it impossible for me to enjoy the characters and plot.

Theater Review

Dynamic diversity is the theme of "Here in America," playing at BYU through this weekend. Robert Post combines mime, comedy and physical powers to captivate the audience in his one-man show.

Post's performance style is unique. His audience appeal doesn't just stem from comic dialogue. He uses props of all sorts to entertain in a new way.

In a delightful skit, Post dances with a bright, orange, one-piece thermal undergarment. Attaching the foot holes to his own feet, he fills the cloth with life. He creates a surprisingly real partner dance. In one portion, Post puts his arm through the thermal's sleeve and wraps it around his own waist.

Post is also an accomplished mime and displays his talents in the show.

He begins the show with a mime skit depicting a stunt pilot. He uses his own voice to communicate the only sound of the sketch: the roar of the airplane. Post magically conveys the pilot's point of view and how the scene would look from afar.

He displays another of his unique talents in his murder mystery skit. Post changes his simple costumes seamlessly behind a black screen. Without a pause, he moves behind the screen and emerges in a different wig and a different character.

The second half of the show is dedicated to "Private Zeno." Zeno is a chef who pushes his cooking cart around Washington D.C.

Post comically makes strong political statements about the government, yet he also leaves much of the scene open to interpretation.

Men find gold at Bows' end

By MASON B. NEIDERHAUSER
mason@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

The BYU men's basketball team defeated the University of Hawaii 81-68 Thursday night in a game that could prove to have serious post-season implications.

With both the Cougars and Rainbows vying for the sixth opening in the WAC Tournament, Thursday's contest could have dealt the Cougars their fifth-straight loss, all but crushing their hopes of post-season play. Instead, the Cougars came out fired up, proving to everyone that they meant business, and won their first game in three weeks.

"This was a big win," BYU head coach Steve Cleveland said. "We'd be in a serious tailspin if we didn't win."

As if they realized the do-or-die position they found themselves in, the Cougars took the court acting like they were in charge. Pulling out to an early 12-2 lead, BYU dominated both ends of the floor. The Cougar defense forced the Rainbow shot-clock to expire, followed immediately by a dunk on the other end from big man Silester Rivers.

Rivers, who led the Cougars with 18 points and nine rebounds, played as confidently as he has all year, taking the ball inside time and time again.

"Silester made a great effort. He was very assertive offensively," Cleveland said.

The Cougars also got help from sophomore Mekeli Wesley, who was a threat both inside and from long-range. Wesley finished with 13 points after hitting a big three early in the game, forcing the Rainbow defense to play him tight the rest of the night.

With point guard Michael Vranes starting the game on the bench because of a bruised left knee, Todd Christensen and Brian Dignan were called on more than either was used to. Neither Christensen nor Dignan had started a game since November, but they couldn't have answered more positively.

Christensen nailed three three-pointers, while Dignan put the charity in charity strip, going a perfect six for six from the free-throw line.

Dignan felt the secret to BYU's success was in the team's preparation.

"We knew what they were going to run," he said. "I think we were more prepared for what they would do."

Christensen agreed.

"We knew they were going to come out hungry," he said. "But we hit a couple big threes and got some good defensive stops."

The Cougar defense was in control to open the game, holding Hawaii to a stodgy 21 first-half points as the Cougars entered the locker room up 20.

"We had a great defensive effort in the first half," Cleveland said.

However, Cleveland couldn't say the same for the second half. Giving up 47 points to the Rainbows in the second half, the BYU squad left room for improvement.

"We can't give up that many second-half points," Cleveland said. "Fortunately we were at home. If we're on the road and we do that, we lose."

Despite the Cougars lethargic second-half defensive effort, BYU fans did see something they have never seen before: Mekeli Wesley dunk. With 7:25 remaining in the game, Wesley found himself alone with the ball under the basket.

"I almost missed it," Wesley said. "It was good to get one down."

BYU will return to the Marriott Center floor Saturday to take on San Diego State. The game tips-off at 7 p.m.

Track team prepares for another Idaho m

By TRISHA BARKER
trisha@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

The BYU women's track and field team is in Pocatello, Idaho, today for the third time in six weeks, running against athletes from all over the Mountain West in the Mountain States Classic.

Head track and field coach Craig Poole said the trips to Idaho are starting to become monotonous.

"We've been to Pocatello too many times," Poole said. "We've met and beat too many of the same teams. It gets old to run week in and week out against the same people in the same place."

Around 20 women will represent BYU at the invitational. Poole said some will be trying to improve their national marks, while others are going for the experience itself.

"Right now we are principally looking at going to the conference meet," he said. "But we have some young kids that need the experience who will run this weekend."

Freshmen Holly Gibbons and Dana Rast will each run in a number of events in Idaho. Both ran in the Husker Invitational in Nebraska last Friday and Saturday, but did not qualify for national competition.

Rast said she will primarily concentrate on staying mentally focused.

"At the Husker I had a really good start, but after that it wasn't the best," she said. "I know I can run faster if I put my mind into things and try my hardest."

Although senior Emily Nay qualified nationally last week in Nebraska, she will run the 5,000-meter race again this weekend to try to gain a better mark.

Nay's time of 16 minutes, 48 seconds at the Husker Invitational ranks her 11th in the NCAA. Because only the top-15 runners will make it to nationals, Nay said she wants to cut her time to 16:40 in Idaho.

"We all know this track like the back of our hands," she said. "It's hard to keep running without a change of venue, but I don't mind because Idaho is close and easy to get to."

BYU's first trip to Pocatello was on Jan. 16 for the Snake River Invitational. The team headed back to Pocatello two weeks later for the Idaho State Invitational on Jan. 29.

The team is ranked sixth in the nation, according to a power ranking done by the United States Track Coaches Association.

Poole said he is pleased with the overall ranking, but feels it is not entirely representative.

"For distance they only record either the 3,000-meter or the 5,000-meter scores," he said. "If they had listed our 5,000 instead of our 3,000, we would probably jump to the top. One of our biggest strengths lies in the distance program."

Although BYU may not be leading at the national level, Poole said the team stands out in the WAC and aims to finish first at the conference championships on Feb. 19-20.

"We're hoping for the team," he said. "But it's not done because of product. It's done by the performance of every individual. To achieve our objective is a process where every person must do the best they are capable of."

Wrestlers hit road for three matches

By ABE MILLS
abe@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

The BYU wrestling team will try to overcome injuries when it hits the road this weekend. The Cougars will face Portland State tonight, Oregon on Saturday and wind up the three day weekend at No. 16 Oregon State.

Head coach Mark Schultz said junior Brandon Ruiz won't make the trip because of pneumonia. Since BYU doesn't have anyone else to fill the spot at the 197-pound weight class, they'll have to forfeit that match.

At the 174-pound weight class, freshman Ethan Harris will likely wrestle, but he is recovering from a concussion sustained in the Southern Colorado meet.

Harris and his opponent hit head-on when they both went for a double leg takedown.

Schultz said giving up a forfeit hurts the team's chances to win all the dual meets this weekend.

"With all the injuries we've had, I don't know how things are going to go. When you give the other team an automatic six points, that makes it tough to stay on top, especially against a team like Oregon State," he said.

One thing Schultz said he isn't worried about is how well his young wrestlers will do on the road.

"The youth on this team have been performing like veterans," Schultz said in a news release. "I think they can perform no matter where they are. Sometimes the crowd rooting against you can fire you up."

Freshman Russell Brunson will have his work cut out for him at the 157-pound weight class. He will wrestle No.15 Eric Jorgensen of Oregon State and No.16 Darryl Christian of Oregon.

Brunson, who is 2-1 on the season, was pulled out of his redshirt year after an injury to freshman Matt Bradshaw.

Brunson's first victory ended in a technical fall (16-0) and his second was a dominating performance over Southern Colorado's two time All-American Benny Charles, 21-8.

Third-ranked Rangi Smart will try to rebound from his close loss to No.1 Joe Heskett of Iowa State. Smart's toughest match this weekend looks to be No.9 Sean Morgan of Oregon.

A good matchup should be found in the doubles competition, where BYU's Manuel Calvo and Damien Ward will likely face the U's Ben Coates and Ashley Dye. A Cougar victory would be big for the duo, as Coates and Dyer recently represented the region in the Rolex National Championships.

Although a relatively unpublicized sport, the BYU/Utah rivalry is strong in men's tennis.

"I felt the rivalry. Everywhere you go, you heard about it," Calvo said. Calvo also said he was sure Utah coach F.D. Robbins has reminded his team of its 7-0 blanking at the hands of the Cougars last year.

One advantage the Utes will have Monday is the home court. Both BYU coaches and players said it is darker on the Utes court, so the team plans to play at the Eccles Center Saturday in preparation.

The match gets underway at 6 p.m.

Softball gains Div. I status

BYU President Merrill J. Bateman announced Thursday the formation of an NCAA-sanctioned women's softball team at BYU. BYU will become the the sixth team in the new Mountain West Conference in the 1999-2000 season.

"For several years, BYU has supported an extramural women's softball program," President Bateman said in a news release. "We are excited about this opportunity and fully expect to be competitive within our conference and the nation."

Elaine Michaelis, BYU's executive director of women's athletics, said in the release "this is a major step forward" for the women's sports programs at BYU.

"We are grateful to the administration for providing more opportunities for women athletes," Michaelis said.

The BYU women's tennis team will return to action this weekend with three matches against top-ranked opponents.

The Cougars will take on 17th-ranked Kansas, Boise State and Kansas State at the indoor tennis courts starting today.

BYU is 0-3 this season and has only won two of 24 matches. According to coach Clark Barton the Cougars will have their hands full with the Jayhawks.

"Kansas has some experience at the top and they are deep," he said. "They were dominant at regionals last fall."

One player the Cougars will be watching out for is Kris Sell of the Jayhawks. She is ranked 25th in the country in singles play.

The Cougars will then face Boise State and Kansas State.

"Boise State is a must win for us and K-State is extremely deep," Barton said. "I'll be happy if we win two out of three matches based on where we are right now."

Kansas State is 0-5 this season.

The Cougars will face Kansas at 2 p.m. today.

Men's track hit with injury bug

NewsNet Sports Writer

As the BYU men's track and field team heads into this weekend's Mountain States Classic in Pocatello, Idaho, injuries are playing a key role in depleting head coach Willard Hirschi's forces.

"It's frustrating," Hirschi said. "It's tough when it seems to be some of your top athletes."

For the Cougars, those hit hardest by the injury bug are the team's best competitors, Hirschi said.

Leonard Myles-Mills is one of those struggling to prepare for the Western Athletic Conference Indoor Championships Feb. 18-20.

He has been trying to overcome a bone chip in his knee while still tearing up his competition around the country. Looking at Myles-Mills' results, you wouldn't know he was injury-riddled, but Coach Hirschi said it could be a serious problem.

"We don't know what to do right now," Hirschi said. "His knee is bothering him considerably, so if we lose him we're in big trouble."

Myles-Mills is the defending national champion in the outdoor 100-meter dash, and has been dominating the indoor meets so far this season.

Last week at the Husker Invitational, Myles-Mills tied a meet record the first day before stumbling on Saturday to a seventh place finish. Earlier in the season, he broke the meet record at the Rocky Mountain Cup in Colorado Springs.

"It's just one of those unfortunate situations," Hirschi said.

Besides Myles-Mills, several others are struggling with injuries. Sprinter Kenneth Andam, last year's WAC Freshman of the Year, is sitting out with a hamstring pull, but could be ready for the WAC finals.

Kirk Sweetnam, one of the top hurdlers in the WAC, also has a pulled muscle and may be out indefinitely.

"He could very well be out for the conference finals," Hirschi said. "As of today, he probably won't make it."

Adding to Hirschi's concerns is the injury to WAC high-jump champion Marc Chenn, who is trying to overcome a sprained ankle.

"We really suffer the consequences of basketball," Hirschi said, referring to Chenn's injury. "It's just frustrating keeping everyone healthy."

Despite the teams' injuries, Hirschi is still excited about the weekend's meet in Pocatello. The meet, which is open to collegians and post-graduates, will involve more than 600 athletes, which should provide a high level of competition.

The Cougars, however, will focus more on resting than competing this weekend, as they will travel only a small group of the team.

"The WAC is incredible," Hirschi said, "so we will prepare for next week's championship by resting some of our key athletes."

The Cougars are ranked 15th nationally according to www.trackwire.com, a Web site devoted to college track and field coverage.

Quilts comfort ill children

By SUMMER BRADFORD
summer@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Members of the MBA Spouse Association and their children gathered Thursday to tie quilts for pediatric cancer patients around the world.

MBASA will donate the quilts to Project Linus, an organization that collects and distributes blankets to children with cancer world wide via its 270 chapters in the United States, Canada and Australia.

Sharon Call, joint coordinator of the service project, said she found out about Project Linus from an article in Parade magazine in September.

"We are all really interested in children and thought this would be a good way to show our love, especially since Valentine's Day is coming up," Call said.

The MBASA does a monthly service project along with other activities including family activities, socials and seminars, said MBASA President Jodelle Peterson.

"It was great to get together and socialize and to do something worthwhile at the same time," said Shae Oligschlaeger, a MBASA member.

"We like doing this project so much we are going to keep making blankets for Project Linus," said Angie Rogers, joint coordinator of the project. "We hope to make eight each semester."

> — Shae Oligschlaeger, MBASA member

Project Linus was started in 1995 by Karen Loucks-Baker of Parker, Colo., who thought of the idea when she read about a little girl whose security blanket helped her throughout her cancer treatments.

The organization has delivered more than 66,000 security blankets to seriously ill children throughout the world. The organization originally targeted pediatric cancer patients, but recently has broadened its focus toward all seriously ill or traumatized children.

People interested in helping Project Linus can make a quilt in any pattern, with child-friendly colors that is washable and donate it to the Salt Lake Chapter of Project Linus. The Project Linus Web site at projectlinus.org provides information about contacts at the local chapter of the organization.

Oscar winner urges racial tolerance

By CATHY GEIGLE
cathy@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Oscar award winner and civil rights lawyer, Morris Dees, spoke to an audience of more than 700 people at Westminster College, urging the people of Utah to end racial hatred.

"As we enter this new century, this new millennium, we find our nation deeply divided.

"Our nation is great because of our diversity, not in spite of it," Dees said.

In an effort to end racial hatred, Dees, the co-founder of the Southern Poverty Law Center, has been fighting hate crimes. For his efforts he has received repeated death threats and burnt offices according to Keppler Associates, Inc., Dees' representatives.

In the 1980s, Dees won a series of civil rights suits which bankrupted the Ku Klux Klan, according to KAI.

Dees' latest success was a $37.8 million suit against the Ku Klux Klan for burning down a church in South Carolina, the largest amount of damages ever won in a civil suit.

His present goal is to teach students about tolerance and to inspire the youth of today, Dees said.

To teach tolerance to students, the Southern Poverty Law Center offers a free curriculum package to every school in the state.

Dean James Seidelman of the Bill and Vieve Gore School of Business at Westminster said, "Relative to the changing demographics of the United States, it is becoming even more important to raise the awareness in people's consciousness about the pervasiveness of hate.

"Morris Dees is going out trying to educate people," Seidelman said.

One of the videos in the "Teaching Tolerance" program won an Oscar and two others were nominated for Oscars, Dees said.

Although Dees believes strongly in these programs, without one main ingredient, he said, they will not succeed.

"All these programs will come to naught unless we truly learn to love one another," Dees said.

At the end of the session Dees opened the floor to questions and comments from the audience.

"I just wanted to say, and I think there would be widespread endorsement from this town, that you are one of the 10 most important Americans alive today," said J.D., a man from the audience.

You are my north. You are my sun.
Who could make my heart feel woozy?
Only thou, my fair sweet Susie.
